WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- Gusty Santa Ana winds across the mountains of Los Angeles and Ventura counties through Thursday.
 - The gusty Santa Ana winds will combine with the warm and dry conditions to bring critical fire weather conditions to much of Los Angeles and Ventura counties today.
 - Red Flag Warnings are in effect until this evening.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

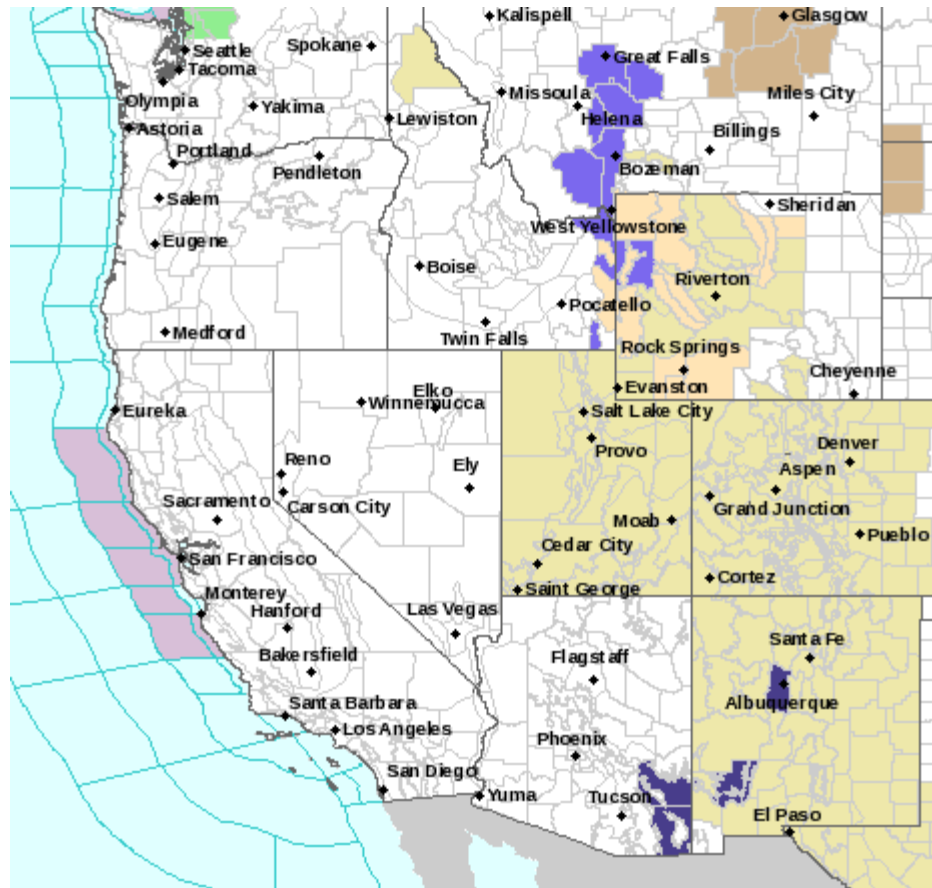

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

- High Risk today for moderately strong N-NE wind/low relative humidity (RH) Western Cascade-Sierra Slopes, Sacramento Valley/Foothills, SE portion of Mid Coast-Mendocino PSA, and Diablo-Santa Cruz Mountains.
- High pressure will dominate the weather pattern next 7 days at least with a few minor weather systems occasionally weakening the high as they pass by to the north.
- Periods of N to NE winds will continue next 7 days, strongest today with gusts 25-35 mph W Cascade-Sierra slopes to the Coast Range. Lighter speeds expected Thursday/Friday, then possibly increasing to significant speeds again Saturday. The Sacramento Valley likely to see stronger-than-daytime N winds overnight into this weekend at least.
- Low RH with poor to moderate overnight recoveries will persist west of the Cascade-Sierra crest with min RH's there generally 8-18% through Monday. Lowest RH recoveries will be in the breezy areas at only 15-35%, significantly higher in calm wind areas.
- Temperatures will be 8-14 degrees above seasonal normals with the warmest days for inland areas upper 70s to lower 80s.
- A few light showers possible near the Oregon border today, maybe (but unlikely) again Friday and Sunday as weather systems pass by to the north.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

- Much warmer and drier conditions are expected the next several days. Offshore winds will be locally gusty over Southern California today with lighter offshore winds expected to continue through Friday. An absence of winds over the weekend will allow a slow cooling trend to occur early next week.
- Highs will warm 5-8 degrees each day through the end of the workweek. By Friday, highs will be in the 70s in the mountains above 5,000 feet to the mid 90s in the valleys and lower foothills.
- Northeast winds of 15-25 mph with gusts to 40 mph will be prevalent today, mainly over Ventura and northern Los Angeles counties. Weaker offshore winds of 10-20 mph will be possible during the night and morning hours the rest of the week. In addition, light offshore winds of 10-15 mph will be possible along the central coast.
- Minimum RH will be in the 10-15% range over a wide area extending from the central coast to the mountains and valleys of Southern California. Poor RH recovery can be expected in the wind-prone areas of Southern California through Friday night. Higher RH will overspread the region next Monday and Tuesday.
- No precipitation is expected the next 10-14 days.
